Introduction

The fourth follow-up of the National Child Development Study (NCDS) provides interview survey data relating to 12,537 23-year-olds living in Great Britain who have been the subjects of this longitudinal study since their birth in 1958. This document will outline the content of the survey with particular reference to the open-coded data.

The content and conduct of the survey*

The interview survey was carried out by NOP Market Research Limited (NOP) and Social and Community Planning Research (SCPR) between August 1981 and March 1982. Each interview took approximately 90 minutes and information was obtained on employment, unemployment and periods out of the labour force; apprenticeship and training; post-school education; marriage; family income, savings, investment and inheritance; respondent reported health and health related behaviour; and voluntary activity and leisure. Although most questions put to respondents were precoded, a number required coding at the completion of the survey. These included, for example:

- (a) occupation and industry;
- (b) details of apprenticeship trades, training and education course subjects;
- (c) durations of activities such as employment, unemployment, etc where full details of dates could not be recorded for punching in the main questionnaire
- (d) responses to precoded questions recorded as 'other' where there was evidence that the precodes were inadequate to reveal the variety of responses
- (e) open-ended questions seeking details of reasons, activities, health and health-related behaviour, etc.

Completed questionnaires were visually checked by NOP and SCPR and the data then transferred by them to computer. Following preliminary computer editing by NOP and SCPR, much of the coding indicated above was carried out by SCPR, using coding frames developed by NCB researchers, and also transferred to computer. Later, the coding, especially that relating to health and to literacy and numeracy, was completed by NCB and more detailed computer editing of the data was carried out.

* The target sample for the 1981 survey was a total of 16,450 individuals - all those who had participated in NCDS1, NCDS2 or NCDS3, excluding those known to have emigrated or to have died. Following initial tracing by the Bureau, details of names and addresses were passed to NOP Market Research Limited and Social and Community Planning Research who carried out further tracing and subsequent interviews. The 12,537 interviews obtained represent 76 per cent of the original target sample and 93 per cent of those traced and contacted by interviewers.

Following the completion of the survey additional data, based on the Small Area Statistics (SAS) of both the 1971 and 1981 Census, were obtained. These summarise the characteristics of the area in which each cohort member was living, both at the time of the survey and at the time of the 1974 survey.

All these data, together with the large number of summary measures, or derived variables - which simplify an element of the original data or combine and simplify two or more elements - which were developed during detailed analysis undertaken as part of the fourth follow-up, are now available from the ESRC Data Archive at the University of Essex .

The table below shows the volume of NCDS4 data which derives from these different sources.

NCDS4 volume and nature of available data

Source of data	No. of variables.
Interviews:	1034
Pre-coded questions	902
Open-coded questions	132
Area data:	438
For 1974 and 1981 address based on 1971 Census	104
For 1981 address based on 1981 Census	334
Derived variables:	356
Non-contacts (Record of tracing and response for those not interviewed)	9

* Based on number of variables currently available. It is intended that derived variables developed by all current and future users of NCDS data will be made available through the Archive.

8.8 OPEN-ENDED CODING

The Coding Operations

The coding operations described here as open-ended consisted of five types of coding:

- i) Occupation and industry coding
- ii) Training and educational course subject and level coding
- iii) Time duration coding
- iv) Coding or re-coding 'other answers' to precoded questions
- v) Coding fully open-ended questions

A computer hole-count of the first 3,200 questionnaires to be computer edited in respect of their precoded data provided an estimate of the likely number of responses to the questions potentially requiring a coding operation. In some cases the likely number was so small that the design of a code-frame was unwarranted (for example, other non-Christian religions - P.82 Q.38); in these cases any answer found was listed verbatim together with the batch code and serial number of the questionnaire on which it was recorded.

With the exception of coding categories i) and iii) above, all questions requiring coding were examined in 200 questionnaires and a verbatim list of the answers found recorded. These lists were used in two ways. In some cases they were used to check and modify already designed code-frames (such as the 'subject' code frame) and in others they were used as the foundation of a new frame (such as 'why no children were wanted').

The frames used to code occupation and industry are discussed later in this section.

Time-duration coding was a very limited task as it related only to fairly rare situations, such as a respondent who had had five or more jobs (in which cases the pre-coded entries on the questionnaire could not provide the information). This task involved calculating from the diary the number of months certain activities spread over.

All open-ended coding was recorded onto a two-sided coding sheet. A copy of this is appended together with a set of general notes for coders describing the coding of categories i)-iii) above and a set of code frames used.

Operationally the coding task was split into two rounds. Coding involving items i)-iii) was tackled first. This allowed more time for development of code-frames for items contained in iv) and v).

The precoded edit program incorporated a routine which printed out for each 'clean' record the question numbers of questions requiring coding (for example, if on page 19, Q.27, a code 3 was ringed, Q.28 was flagged as requiring coding). Coders used this to identify questionnaires and questions requiring coding, thus saving considerable clerical time.

The work of all coders was checked at both coding rounds. The first batch of returned work from a coder (a standard batch of 25 questionnaires) received a 100% check from the coding supervisor. Any errors were immediately reported back to the coder and corrected. Any other work completed by the coder was then checked and amended. After the 100% check had proved satisfactory, a check was made on one questionnaire in each returned batch. If any errors were found, the check was widened until all errors were identified and corrected.

Occupation Coding

Four questions required occupation coding:

First job

Current job

Last job

Spouse/partner's job

The Bureau wished to classify each job by:

Socio-economic Group (17 groups)

Social Class (5 groups)

Condensed KOS (161 groups)

using the 1980 Classification of Occupations* as a basis.

This was done by coding each job by its 1980 Occupation Group code (550 four or five digit codes) and by Employment Status within that job using specially prepared translation tables. The first three digits of the Occupation Group Code contains the Condensed KOS code. Socio-economic group and social class classification codes for the job were not manually coded but derived automatically via a specially written computer program which related Occupation Group to Employment Status and coded on to the data tape during the computer edit phase. This program was based on Appendix B.1 of the Classification of Occupations 1980.

In addition, for comparability with earlier rounds of NCDS, the Bureau wished some types of jobs to be given their 1970 Socio-economic group and social class codes as well as their 1980 codes. The translation tables indicated these jobs with an asterisk. Those so indicated were given the relevant codes using the 1970 Classification of Occupations manual.

Industry Coding

Each job was also classified into one of the 60 Classes contained in the 1980 standard Industrial Classification. Three additional codes were added to this classification to allow greater comparability with the earlier 1968 version. These were:

* Classification of Occupations 1980, OPCS, HMSO 1980.

 Standard Industrial Classification: Revised 1980, Central Statistical Office, HMSO 1979.

Code 38 Shipbuilding

Code 86 Accountancy Services

Code 90 Legal Services

Computer Editing Occupation Coding

The method by which 1980 socio-economic group and social class codes were derived enabled a considerable amount of internal checking for validity to be carried out. In most cases valid combinations of occupation group and employment status codes are limited. The computer checking of valid combinations was in addition to the manual checking discussed in Section 8.8.

8.9 PROVISION OF DATA TO THE BUREAU

Precoded data was passed to the Bureau in a series of magnetic tapes in a format suited to their computer facilities. The open-ended data was similarly passed to the Bureau.

When all coding and editing was complete, questionnaires, contact and record sheets, and medical consent forms were also passed to the Bureau.

GENERAL NOTES

The next stage in the coding will be for :-

- (1) OCCUPATION/INDUSTRY
- (2) COURSE SUBJECT AND LEVEL
- (3) TIME DURATIONS

With each box of questionnaires you will find print-out sheets. These will 'flag' for you whether these particular points need to be done - please tick print-out to denote coding done.

When returning work, leave coding sheets with print-out inside each box. Could you make sure that coding sheets and questionnaires are in same serial number order. If there are queries, still leave in serial number order, with 'TAB' on.

Could you then stick, below large label on outside of box, a YELLOW LABEL, to denote above coding has been done. If there are queries, write a large "Q" on the yellow label.

Clear boxes should be taken to room upstairs (TOP RIGHT).
Any with QUERIES, LEAVE IN JEAN'S ROOM.

Relevant documents needed are :-

- 1) CLASSIFICATION OF OCCUPATIONS 1980
- 2) CLASSIFICATION OF OCCUPATIONS 1970
- 3) S.I.C. 1980

LIST VERBATIM WITH BATCH CODE AND SERIAL NUMBER

INSTRUCTIONS TO CODERS ON USE OF SUBJECT CODING FRAME

A The coding frame is set out in the following way:-

- (i) Major headings for each subject area are boxed.
These are listed in the following order:
 - P.1 Education, Medicine, Dentistry & Ancillary Health subjects, Engineering
 - P.2 Technology, Agriculture, Forestry and Veterinary Science
 - P.3 Science, Social Administrative and Business Subjects
 - P.4 Miscellaneous Professional and Vocational Subjects, Languages, Arts, other than Languages
 - P.5 Music, Drama & Visual Arts.
- (ii) Subjects are listed in alphabetical order under these major headings
- (iii) Within each major grouping there are some subjects which consist of a combination of subjects e.g. hairdressing/cosmetics/beauty and these are known as within-group combination. There are no within-group combinations under the Education heading.

In most instances coding for subjects will be easy - use the major headings to help you locate the given subject.

There will be a number of cases where a course will be for a qualification or qualifications which are not therefore single subject categories qualification. The subject coding frame is designed to cope with these cases, and the following explanation should help you to deal with them.

B Rules for coding combination of subjects

If a subject recorded on the questionnaire appears to encompass two or more subjects on the coding frame then it should be treated in one of three ways:

- (i) If it includes both a major and subsidiary activity e.g. "bricklaying (also did some pottery)", code for main subject only, in this case: 161
- (ii) If all subjects fall within one major heading e.g. "Biology & Chemistry", code as within-group combination (in this case 410)
- (iii) If subjects come from more than one major head, e.g. "Psychology & Biology", use the combination category relating to the subject with the lowest code number (that is, the combination category from the relevant main head which comes first in the list). In the example, Science (which includes Biology) precedes Social, Admin, Business (which includes Psychology), therefore, this combination is coded 411, combinations of Science with other subjects.

C Coding CSE's 'O' and 'A' levels (and City & Guilds or ONC's where there are several subjects)

- (i) If 'A's or ONC/ONDs, City & Guilds are entered on the questionnaire in combination with 'O's or CSEs (i.e. 'O's or CSEs are taken as part of the same course): ignore 'O's/CSEs.

- (ii) Code 'A' levels to the subject code or appropriate combination category.
- (iii) - If the course is for 'O' levels and/or CSEs only:
 - If there is only one (e.g. Maths 'O' level) code to the appropriate subject code (380 in this case)
 - If there is more than one, always code as 708 - this category is to be used only for these cases.

D Professional Qualification

If the qualification is not an 'O' or 'A' level and it is hard to code, check the professional qualifications list, (even if the qualification code is not a 24). Bear in mind that the list is in strict alphabetical order, so that, for example, "institutions" come after "institutes". If it turns out that the course is for a professional qualification, even though it has not been coded as such, you should recode it to the appropriate level (see code-book).

CODING FRAME

Reasons for not wanting (more) children: Page 52, Q.55. Cols 2349-54.

Code up to three responses per respondent: first three reasons given take priority.

PERSONAL REASONS

01 Dislike of or uninterested in children

e.g. I don't desire any - I have two horses and I spend most of my time with them; Just don't want them, never have done - not interested, I suppose.

02 Self-perceived unsuitability

e.g. Basically because I'm too selfish; I don't think I'd be a very good mother because I prefer animals; I have not a lot of patience with children.

REASONS CONNECTED WITH PARTNER OR EXISTING CHILDREN

03 Family completed

(do not use if 04 or 11 would be more appropriate)

e.g. I think two is enough; I've got a boy and a girl and don't feel I need any more; Family now complete (three children).

04 Reasons connected with partner or spouse

e.g. My husband doesn't like children - they drive him mad; I don't think my wife could cope; My partner doesn't want to have children.

05 Reasons connected with existing children

(Excluding difficulties with a previous pregnancy or childbirth, which should be coded 14) e.g. He's hyperactive and I couldn't cope with another one; He's such a handful that we don't really want another one; Because this one has been so difficult.

LIMITATION ON OTHER ACTIVITIES

06 General restriction of activities

e.g. I want to enjoy myself - when they are young you are housebound and I want to have more time to myself now; There's the restriction they place upon you; there's so much I've got to see and do before I become involved with children; I don't see why I should tie myself down when I have two near together; I travel about too much; I want to enjoy my life now; Because they tie you down too much.

07 Too much responsibility

e.g. It's a big responsibility; Too much responsibility bringing up children; I don't think I could cope with the responsibility.

08 Want to work or pursue career or continue education

e.g. Because it would interfere with my career which I love; I just feel that now she is growing up I would like to be able to go out and get a job; I'd like to go to work; I feel at the moment that I want a career and I don't think its fair to have a career and bring up children.

LIMITED PERSONAL OR MATERIAL RESOURCES

09 Financial reasons (excluding general coping coded 11)

e.g. We can't afford to keep them. Costs in general - food, clothing is so expensive; we can't afford any more, not if we wan't to give them everything they need..., Two is enough expense-wise; Husband's job is not all that secure - don't want to take on too much; We can't afford it.

10 Other material limitations

e.g. We want to buy this house and if we have any more the council won't let us; we don't have the room; problems of overcrowding.

11 Personal resources limited (excluding reasons connected with spouse or partner coded 03 or 04).

e.g. Two is enough to cope with - they're a handful; Could not cope with any more; Can give more to one child - everything - not just money but time and attention.

HEALTH-RELATED REASONS OR PHYSICAL FEARS

12 Fear or dislike of physical aspects of pregnancy or childbirth (excluding fears based on previous experience, coded at 14)

e.g. I don't like the thought of physically having them...; They ruin your figure; I'm frightened of childbirth.

13 Fear of having a handicapped child

e.g. Both have rather nasty defects (? physical) and would hate to have one with both defects; Fear of child being born with excema; Fear of passing on inheritable condition.

14 Difficulty with previous pregnancies or births

e.g. Had a bad time and it put me off - forceps delivery; I was very ill - as was my daughter - last time and I think the risk is too great; I don't want another long stay in hospital - had to stay three months this time; The strain would be too much as my periods of pregnancy involved me being constantly in the care of a doctor.

STATE OF THE WORLD

15 Possibility of nuclear war

e.g. I feel we won't live in a stable enough world - they have a good home life, its just the outside world with the bombs; it is not viable - I think there will be a neutron bomb, anyway.

16 The economic future (exclude personal finances coded at 09)

e.g. I don't think there is any point bringing children into the world as it is now - well, the job situation as it stands at the moment; Well, I can't really see the point of bringing them into the world because of all the unemployment, etc - who'd look after them when we were unable to work.

17 The state of the world in general (exclude responses which refer to nuclear war or the state of the economy specifically).

e.g. I don't think its worth bringing children into the world - there's nothing for them to look forward to; Not much future to bring a child into the world now; It's pointless bringing them into this unsettled world; I can't see any future for our children on this miserable planet at this stage.

*18 OTHER REASONS

e.g. Don't want to get married; My future is not as I want at the moment - my status; I would like a boy, but you can go on for years trying; There's enough of us in the family now to carry on the good name.

19 CONDITIONAL RESPONSES

e.g. It would depend on who I marry; Maybe as I get older I'll mellow; I've only wanted one always - might change my mind later, I can't say.

20. DON'T KNOW

e.g. Don't really know; Can't say.

21. IRRELEVANT RESPONSES

e.g. Its best to get to know your husband first; I like children in general. (Note: response does not give a reason for not wanting children).

22. REFUSED TO GIVE REASON

e.g. Refused to answer because husband was in the room; Did not wish to give details.

34 NOT VOLUNTARY WORK

e.g. Blood Donor, taking part in identity parade, Fostering children, contributing to a cause or attending a fund raising event as a paying guest, Jury Service.

Notes

Repeating the activity code:

eg Fundraising for both Cancer Research and the local primary school is an acceptable repeat of the activity code as both the organisations and beneficiaries are different.

Running/organising: Try to code in what way or who the informant is running/organising eg. runs charity shop - sells any jumble brought in - code 1; run football team - code 12; started Day Centre for Elderly - on Management Committee - code 7; but if no detail is given eg. run an elderly people's group - code 23.

CODING FRAME AND OPEN CODED ANSWERS TO LITERACY AND NUMERACY QUESTIONS
(Q29, Q8; P29, Q11; P30, Q13)

The proposed coding frames below are based on a minimum of 100 responses requiring coding. Amongst these questionnaires there were no responses which required multi-coding. In the event that responses are found for which two or more codes apply, these will be dealt with either by coding as 'other' or by extending the codes to include combinations where needed. Given that no such need arose in more than 100 responses, it is most unlikely that this will lead to any problems in coding the remaining questionnaires that might affect the use of the coded variables.

1. Respondents who said that problems with reading, writing or spelling caused difficulties in everyday life were asked 'What things in particular cause difficulties?'.

Overwhelmingly, respondents gave answers which described aspects of their lives which were affected by their lack of skill rather than the specific tasks which they found difficult. The exception to this was the large number of responses in which problems with forms and/or letters were mentioned. This information is worthy of coding because of the many situations in which the ability to deal with these things are at a premium, for example, in applying for jobs or benefit

A number of responses indicated very limited literacy skills indeed (typically 'I can't read or write'), this information too, will be coded, to identify what can only be described as a very disadvantaged group of people.

The proposed coding is as follows:

a. Context in which difficulties occur

- 1 = at work
- 2 = applying for/looking for/interviews for jobs
- 3 = at home - children
- 4 = at home - household management, shopping etc.
- 5 = other context
- 6 = no particular context mentioned.

b. Problems with letters or forms

- 1 = letters and forms cause problems
- 2 = letters cause problems
- 3 = forms cause problems
- 4 = neither mentioned.

c. severely limited literacy skills

- 1 = answer indicates severe problems
- 2 = other.

2. Respondents who said that problems with number work cause difficulties in everyday life were asked 'What things in particular cause difficulties?'

As with the responses described above, the context in which problems were experienced featured largely in the responses to this question. In addition, respondents often gave a particular mathematical activity as being difficult or impossible. The proposed coding is as follows:

a. Context in which difficulties occur

- 1 = at work
- 2 = getting jobs
- 3 = shopping/household management/bills
- 4 = doing/getting on courses
- 5 = other
- 6 = no context mentioned.

b. Activity found difficult

- 1 = 'anything to do with numbers at all'
- 2 = adding/subtracting/'reckoning up'
- 3 = multiplication/division
- 4 = fractions/percentages
- 5 = converting to/understanding metric measurements
- 6 = no particular activity mentioned
- 7 = other.

3. Respondents who said that they were prevented from doing something they would like to do by lack of literacy or numeracy skills were asked 'What in particular are you prevented from doing?'

The vast majority of answers were related to work, training or education. The proposed coding is as follows:

- 1 = access to desired/better/any jobs
- 2 = access to training courses for jobs
- 3 = promotion prospects
- 4 = finding jobs in papers/writing off for jobs
- 5 = doing things with (own) children
- 6 = access to classes/courses (not specifically for jobs)
- 7 = other
- 8 = irrelevant/inappropriate answer.

CODING GUIDE BASED ON I.C.D.

I.C.D. (1977) Coding for:-

- I. Longstanding illness, disability, infirmity of child (N5068) (q.1, p.46)
- II. Longstanding illness, disability, infirmity of respondent (N5740) (q.2, p.69)
- III. Disability from accident (N5853) (q.40, p.74)
- IV. Hospital admissions (N5855) (q.43, p.75)
- V. Other supervised medical conditions (N5813) (q.35, p.73)
- VI. Other medical conditions (N5873) (q.48, p.76)

These will be coded according to the International Classification of Diseases: (I.C.D.) which is produced by the World Health Organization. The ninth revision of the Classification will be used.

The I.C.D. is extensively used in health studies. Although originally formulated last century to categorise causes of death, its scope has successively been broadened for use in studies of general morbidity. The General Household Survey, for example, uses the most detailed version of I.C.D. to code all conditions ranging from longstanding illness, disability or handicap to reasons for consulting a G.P. An internationally accepted standard with such a wide range of application seemed the obvious choice for a longitudinal study such as NCDS. As a scheme that covers all age groups it will be suitable for use in any projected follow up of the survey members. Furthermore, it not only allows the identification of conditions currently of interest but also introduces some element of foresight in coding conditions which may become of relevance to the future health of the 23 year olds.

The I.C.D. is primarily a coding frame based on 3 digits from 1 to 999. Most of these categories can be further subdivided but it was felt that it is neither desirable nor practicable to use such subdivisions for NCDS 4. Non-specificity of condition is taken into account in the scheme by assigning special codes according to location or in some cases circumstances. Use of the 3 digit codes enables us to identify individuals with selected conditions. It also provides flexibility in the choice and range of regroupings to be used in the analysis. These can be produced at the processing stage without a further coding operation from the questionnaire being necessary. Perusal of a sample of questionnaires indicated that the information collected in NCDS 4 is suitable for coding according to the 3 digit I.C.D. It should be noted that many of the available categories will be unused. This is to be expected with such a comprehensive coding frame and does not affect the arguments for using it.

The WHO has produced an alphabetical index for assigning conditions to I.C.I. It includes alternative expressions, some of them non-medical, for conditions where they exist. To make the coding task easier we have produced a much shorter index containing some of the more commonly reported conditions and some of the non medical expressions that do not appear in the WHO. This index is intended for the coding of handicapping conditions, hospital admissions, conditions requiring medical supervision and other medical conditions. A preliminary version of the index, which is likely to be subject to some additions/amendments, is attached. Respondents were asked about up to seven hospital admissions and up to 4 conditions requiring regular medical supervision. The questions on longstanding illness, disability or handicap were open-ended, as were the questions about permanent disability resulting from accidents and about other medical conditions.

Notes on the I.C.D. Codes

1. Each code has either 3 or 4 digits. Usually the fourth digit - when there is one - indicates a further classification within the main category. For example, codes (N) 880 - (N) 887 cover laceration of open wounds of upper limb, and to each of these categories a fourth digit is added as follows:-

- .0 Without mention of complication
- .1 Complicated
- .2 With tendon involvement
- .9 Late effect

This frame is based on the first three digits.

2. (i) The abbreviation N.O.S. = Not otherwise specified
(ii) The abbreviation N.E.C. = Not elsewhere classifiable.

A composite list of commonly reported conditions, terms not in the Index, and conditions which present some difficulty in coding has been drawn up. It should be noted that this list is always used in conjunction with the I.C.D. as coding from the list alone could lead to error.

3. Alphabetical codes are not used. These are substituted here for 3 digit codes not used by I.C.D. - see back page of coding guide.

The I.C.D. is grouped into 17 broad subcategories. They are listed here, along with their 3 digit codes and examples of conditions that are likely to be reported in NCDS.

I.C.D: DISEASE CODING* - Notes for Coders on use of ICD Vols I and II

Diseases are coded from the "International Classification of Diseases" (World Health Organisation). Where a condition can be identified, any symptoms of that same condition are ignored; for example aching limbs are not coded for a person who has flu. Where a condition cannot be identified, symptoms are coded. This frame uses the 3 digit codes only.

Coders are instructed to read through the Introduction in the I.C.D. before starting to code diseases.

The index is used in the following way:

First, the condition is looked up in the alphabetical index in Volume II. The number given after the description is then checked in Volume I to ensure that the category is sensible when it is applied to the specific condition described in the schedule. Also, a check may be made against the sex of the informant where this may have some bearing on the codes used (e.g. in the case of infertility sex is taken into account).

In most cases the description given in the schedule will be in everyday language rather than medical terms, and Volume II of the index does include non-medical terms. The amount of detail given by informants varies, and sometimes the recorded answer includes both a disability and also the cause of the disability. Where this occurs the cause only is coded, but if the disability resulting from the cause developed at a later stage and there is a late effect code to cover the disease, this code is used. In some cases there is a completely separate 3 digit code for late effect; for example late effect of Polio. A rough guide to indicate at which point the late effect code should be applied is to count as late effect anything which developed from a cause a year or more after the original illness or disability was experienced. There are exceptions to this however; for example, a fracture which will not heal is coded as late effect of fracture irrespective of when the fracture occurred. If the cause is not given, the disability is coded.

In the case of surgery or operations, the condition or complaint leading to surgery is coded unless it is not specified in which case the code 898 is used.

The International Classification of Diseases (1977 edition). W.H.O.

A classification of diseases is a system of categories to which disease entities are assigned according to a set of established criteria. The International Classification of Diseases (ICD) is a statistical classificatory disease coding system devised by the World Health Organisation (WHO) to serve a variety of purposes - vital statistics offices (OPCS), sickness surveys (including the General Household Survey), medical services etc. It was devised to provide a common basis of classification for general statistical use. It is periodically reviewed and amended by the WHO at the International Conference for the Revision of the International Classification of Diseases. The ICD is a widely used system and its use facilitates comparisons of data from different sources - independent surveys, vital statistics and the General Household Survey (OPCS) etc.
